Dear Judi and Sue:

I wanted to express a genuine thank you again for speaking to my corrections course. Your presentation was a great opportunity for the students to learn about the issues facing children and families with an incarcerated parent. I am confident that your inspiring work has encouraged our students to think about these issues in a new way.

My goal in having people working in the corrections field speak to the students is to provide them with real-world applications for the theoretical and historical information I lecture about and they read in their textbook. Your presentation was particularly useful as it provided them with information that is unfortunately not readily available in standard undergraduate textbooks. Your presentation was a wonderful complement to my lecture on the challenges facing people as they reenter society as well as their family dynamic after a period of incarceration.

Again, your presentation was wonderful experience for students and I really appreciate the time and effort that you took in making this possible.

Sincerely,

Eileen M. Ahlin, Ph.D.
